Martyrs to Headache

Book relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional, not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alternative and Blood-purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Anstine st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every spring, for years," writes Izzie W. DeVan, 292 Fifth street, Brooklyn, N. Y., "I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykes, Pa., writes: "Every spring, for years, I have suffered dreadfully from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. Every spring, also, I have been afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded me to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited me wonderfully. My health is now perfect. Martyrs to headache should try

HOW HE WAS SAVED.

BY WALLACE P. REED.

For The Constitution.

John Wilson staggered back and looked at the black slip of paper in his hand. His face was very pale, and his slight frame trembled in every fibre.

The other members of the society, not more than a dozen in all, had all drawn white slips from the hat. They looked intensely relieved, and gazed at Wilson anxiously and doubtfully. Wilson wiped the cold perspiration from his brow and straightened himself to his full height.

"I am the youngest man among you," he said, "and it seems strange that chance has selected me for a work requiring almost superhuman courage and nerve. But you may trust me. I will be true to my oath if I have to die for it."

"We do not doubt you," replied the president of the society; "but you must expect to be watched. Every anarchist is bound to be a spy upon his comrades and is pledged to kill a traitor wherever he may be found. So, my brother, while we trust you, the safety of the society will compel us to shadow you until you complete your task."

"When the hour arrives," answered Wilson, "you will find that you are not mistaken in your man."

One by one the anarchists took the young man by the hand and assured him of their confidence and support. Then the meeting adjourned, and the members of the society dispersed.

Wilson had been an active anarchist for six months, and his zeal and ability had caused him to be made a member of the executive committee. Little by little he had involved himself in the plots of his comrades until he was no retreat for him, and he had no choice but to go deeper into the business.

At the meeting of the executive committee which had resulted in the drawing of a black slip of paper by Wilson, the anarchists had decided to take a desperate step. The most obnoxious man in the eyes of the laboring men in the great metropolis was Bullion, the millionaire. When work was hard to get and the wages were low, Bullion was the man who stood at the bottom of it. Whenever a body of strikers failed to secure higher wages it was because Bullion's money and power enabled him to crush every combination. The grasping monopolist controlled business and labor, and the police, the courts and the legislature were supposed to be his willing tools.

The assassination of Bullion was quietly discussed by the executive committee at several meetings. Finally the members drew lots to select the executioner, and it was Wilson's misfortune to be the man.

As the young anarchist made his way through the dark and narrow streets leading to his hiding place, he felt strangely nervous. He had never thought that it would come to such a pass. He had dreamed of a social revolution in which he would be one of the leaders, but he had never thought of committing murder.

The day fixed for the deed was just one week off. Bullion was absent from the city when the matter had been decided, but he knew the day and hour set for his return, and the plan was to have Wilson throw a bomb into his carriage as it passed a certain park near the rich man's residence.

"In seven days," said Wilson after he had reached his room and locked himself in; "the time is very short, but I am likely to go mad before the fatal day arrives. Great God! But it is horrible. I had hoped that anarchy would make me a hero, and now I find that I am to be a cowardly assassin. Be it so. I will keep my oath and do my appointed work."

He felt that it was impossible to sleep, but after awhile he threw himself on a lounge, and when morning came he found to his surprise that he had managed to get several hours' slumber.

As he was out of employment and had nothing to occupy his thoughts but the murderous task assigned to him, he did not care to leave his room during the day.

It was nearly noon when one of the children in a house—a large tenement building containing scores of families—tapped at his door. He opened the door, and a young man, who he had never seen before, stood before him, saying that the postman had left it.

Wilson very rarely received a letter. He was an Englishman, a comparative stranger in the country, with no friends but the members of his society, and they were not in the habit of communicating with him through the mail. He looked at the address on the envelope, but could not recognize the writing, a bold but hastily scrawled hand. He opened the missive and read these mysterious words:

"Your plot has been discovered, and you are watched. Fly before it is too late."

There was no signature. The postmark showed that the letter had been mailed in the city.

The back-handed writing led Wilson to the conclusion that the cryptography was disguised. But who could have written it?

After brooding over the matter for an hour or more the puzzled conspirator burned the note and attempted to forget all about it.

He had just some of his comrades that night he dared not mention the mysterious message. Possibly it was a trick to test him. It would be prudent to await further developments.

The next morning when Wilson started to dress he saw something white on the floor. It was a letter that had evidently been shoved under the door. With one bound he seized it and tore it open. He recognized the familiar back hand with a shudder, as he read the following:

"You will fall in your design. If you are wise you will leave at once."

The anarchist was now completely bewildered and not a little alarmed. After destroying the paper he paid a visit to the president of the executive committee. The details of the removal of Bullion were discussed, but not a word was said that threw any light upon the anonymous letters.

In the morning Wilson found another warning letter under his door, and the next day the postman left one. By this time the wretched man was driven almost crazy. He began to feel certain that he was discovered. The conduct of his friends had convinced him that they had nothing to do with the strange messages.

At last the night before the fatal day arrived, and Wilson shut himself up in his room, the victim of the most dreadful thoughts imaginable.

"Have I been writing in my sleep?" said Wilson. There was no doubt about it. He still held the broken pen, and something was written on the paper before him. He read these lines:

"There is yet time for you to be saved. Alonzo P. Lynch."

His pen had fallen him just at this point. But the writing was in a back hand. The man now thoroughly awake stared at the paper in astonishment. Then he opened a box of writing paper and examined it. It was of the same size and quality used by the author of the mysterious letters.

"I see it all now!" groaned Wilson. "This wicked enterprise has so unbidden my mind that I have tonight after midnight my sleep left me to write these letters to myself. In my sleep I have mailed some of them and others I have laid just inside the door. Surely, the hand that wrote these letters is the hand that wrote the letters in this paper."

But it could not see his way out of the trouble. If he disappointed the anarchists they would kill him.

"It is all right," he muttered. "I'll not take Bullion's life. I know what I'll do."

Day had dawned and he realized that he would have to act promptly. He went to his mirror, and opening his razor, he took off his collar.

"One stroke," he said, "and it will be over." Just then he heard a newboy crying something in the street. He paused to listen.

"All about Bullion's death!" the boy shouted. Wilson dropped the razor and rushed down into the street in his shirt sleeves. He bought a paper, and in a half fainting condition, read the startling headlines.

The great millionaire monopolist was dead. A stroke of paralysis had carried him off in the night!

Wilson crawled back to his room and falling back, knees into a flood of tears.

It was some time before he could compose himself, but after awhile he made his toilet and visited the headquarters of the anarchists.

"It is not your fault," said the president of the executive committee pleasantly. "We all know that you would have done your duty. Well, we must pick up another victim, and you shall do it with a slunder, and retired."

That night he disappeared from the city, and from that day to this his fellow-anarchists have never heard from him, nor have they any clue to his whereabouts.

A SHOT AND A THRUST.

From The Detroit Free Press.

When we came to throw out pickets in front of our lines on the night after dealing the federal army a shot and a thrust were made.

We had won a victory, and the bulk of the federal army was making for the Potomac, but there was a great gap in the line, and with a thrust for vengeance, and along the front of my division the blue coats were alert and ready for night attack. It was about 9 o'clock when the federal army was pushed out, and to get the place assigned we had to crawl on our hands and knees for the last 200 feet. When I finally got settled in place it was at the base of a shallow trench, and with a thrust for vengeance, and along the front of my division the blue coats were alert and ready for night attack. GENUINE JOHANN HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT

Indorsed by all the Leading Physicians Throughout the Civilized World.

THE GENUINE
JOHANN HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT is the Best Health Beverage, Tonic and Nutritive known. The genuine article has the signature of JOHANN HOFF and MORITZ EISNER on the neck of every bottle.

The Great Tonic for Dyspepsia.

AN ABSTRACT FROM THE WORK ON PULMONARY DISEASES PUBLISHED BY PROF. PROSPER DE PIETRA SANTA, OF PARIS.
"For several years Johann Hoff, of Berlin, has manufactured a liquid malt extract which the medical profession have used with such beneficial results, because of its great nutritive properties. This malt extract has remarkable nutritive action, both tonic and refreshing, and has proved to be of great value in chronic diseases, producing a contraction of the muscular of the digestive organs. As an aid to digestion, it is wonderful in inducing up lost power. The great practitioners of Paris—Blache, Barth, Gueneau de Mussy, Pidal, Fauvel, Empis, Danst, Robert de Lator, Bouchet, Florry and Fardien—highly recommend this pleasant remedy in restoring weak digestion. My personal experience leads me to confirm the praise which Prof. Lavean expresses in the following words: 'As a large number of patients lack the necessary power to digest solid food, and would through the use of stimulants excited and weakened, therefore I regard it of immense value to the practitioner to be able to bring to his aid a nutritious tonic and remedy like the Genuine Johann Hoff's Malt Extract, which will act not only as a tonic, but as a nutrient as well, and which is less exciting than wine or any stimulant.'"

The Great Tonic for the Debilitated.

JOHANN HOFF'S MALT AS A TONIC.—The value of the genuine Johann Hoff's Malt (Eisner) as a tonic has long been known to the profession. It has seemed to us that better effects are secured by using it than those usually secured by the use of any other tonic. It is a tonic in the morning and the remainder in the evening. A large wine-glass three times a day, so that nearly a bottle may be consumed in twenty-four hours, will give the best results. It is a tonic in the morning and the remainder in the evening. DR. LAMB'S LETTER.
1240 HANOVER ST., PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 4, 1886.
MESSRS. EISNER & MENDELSON: I have used Johann Hoff's Malt Extract for the past five years in my private practice, and have found it to be the best Health Restoring Beverage and Tonic Nutritive known. I have found it especially good in persons convalescing from fever, in cases of dyspepsia, for mothers nursing and in cases of weak children, and also in lung troubles. My attention was drawn by the immense importation semi-monthly, and about a million of bottles imported by you have passed my inspection in the Custom-House satisfactorily for the past five years. Yours respectfully,
W. W. LAMB, M. D., Chief Drug Inspector, U. S. Port of Philadelphia.

The Only Genuine Hoff's Malt Extract.

Johann Hoff's Genuine Malt Extract has been chemically investigated in the laboratory of Professor von Kietzky and has been found to contain only articles which are of great value in the treatment of debility and general debility.
PROF. DR. GRANTZKE, University of Vienna, Austria.

MESSRS. EISNER & MENDELSON.—GENTLEMEN: Will you do me the kindness to let me know how you sell the genuine Johann Hoff's Malt Extract by the gross? I see Dr. S. W. H. Mitchell and Prof. W. G. Goodell speak very favorably of it. I am extremely anxious to introduce it in my practice, and would be glad to show the citizens of Western North Carolina what it will do in such cases as I wish to prescribe it for. I refer you to my friend, Prof. W. G. Goodell, whose kindness in making me acquainted with your Malt Extract is much appreciated. I shall never forget to appreciate the genuine Johann Hoff's Malt Extract, also under Dr. S. W. Mitchell. Address

THE SUPREME COURT.

Decisions Rendered During the Week.

REPORT OF DECISIONS BY J. H. LUMPKIN

Supreme Court Reporter—Hon. L. E. Black, Jr., Chief Justice, and Hon. M. H. Blandford and T. J. Simmons, Associates.

Decisions Rendered November 12, 1887.

New England Mortgage Security Co. vs. Robinson, trustee, et al. Equity, from Washington. Judgment. Executions. Homestead. Levy and Sale. Equity. Fraud. Res Adjudicata. (Before Judge Lumpkin.)
Blandford, J.—A bill alleged, in brief, as follows: Complainant loaned to a large number of persons, and to the defendant, a mortgage on certain land. Afterwards two executions in favor of other parties were levied on this land, and it was brought to sale thereunder. At the time of the sale, a third person announced that the land was sold subject to the right of the defendant in execution to take a homestead therein of the value of $2,000 in realty. This person became the purchaser and fraudulently procured the sheriff to make a deed to the land in fee, stating nothing therein as to the right of the defendant in execution to take a homestead. The purchase was fraudulent also because after the complainant had notified the sheriff and the person who became the purchaser that the order of the executions under which the land was sold had been paid off and discharged by complainant, and had requested the sheriff so to enter it and return it to the clerk's office, the sheriff nevertheless proceeded to sell and the other person to buy the property. After this, the purchaser filed a bill in the circuit court of the United States for the purpose of enjoining the complainant from enforcing against the property the judgment of the foreclosure of the mortgage which had been obtained in that court. The injunction was granted, and therefore the complainant could not proceed at law.

Held, that if the sale was under an execution founded upon a judgment which had been paid off and discharged, it was fraudulent and void.
2. If the property was sold subject to the homestead right of the defendant in execution, and the purchaser purchased at the time of the sale, but afterwards procured the sheriff to make him a deed in fee, this was a fraud, and the mortgage creditor of the defendant in execution would have a right to have the deed set aside for fraud or else reformed so as to make it speak the truth; and a bill for that purpose was not demurrable for want of equity.
3. There was no adequate remedy at law, or if so, the remedy in equity was more adequate and complete.

4. From the allegations in the bill, in the absence of the bill filed or decree rendered in the United States court, it is impossible to determine on demurrer whether the matter was adjudicated in that court or not. This could be set up by plea, or possibly by way of answer.
Judgment reversed.
J. W. Robinson, for plaintiff in error.
J. A. Robson, for defendant.

Durch vs. Augusta, Gibson and Sandersville Railroad Co. Trespass, from Richmond. Evidence. New Trial. (Before Judge Roney.)

Blandford, J.—1. Where a land-owner signed a written agreement presented to him by one of the agents of a railroad company, whereby he agreed that, if the survey of the railroad should run through his land, it was to give a right of way through them thirty feet in width, on the trial of an action brought by him against the company for taking and occupying a right of way across his land, it was not competent for him to prove by parol that he stated to the agent of the company, before signing the paper, that they might come through his land if they desired to do so, but that they must come along a certain ditch, there being no effort to reform the writing or show any fraud which would authorize a reformation thereof.
The verdict was sustained by the evidence, and there was no error in refusing to grant a new trial.
Verdict affirmed.

F. W. Capers, Jr., by brief, for plaintiff in error.
William T. Gary, for defendant.

Epstein vs. Levenson & Co. Attachments, from City Court of Richmond County. Jurisdiction. Practice in Superior Court. Amendment. (Before Judge Eve.)
Blandford, J.—1. Where the jurisdiction of a city court was limited to the sale of real estate against the same defendant, one for $1,800 and the other for $700, there was no error in refusing, motion, to consolidate the two causes were brought therein by the plaintiff, and thereby out of the jurisdiction of the court.

2. When an act has been passed by both branches of the legislature and approved by the governor, the act is valid, and in the absence of the enrolled act, the court may look to the act as published by the public printer; but where the enrolled act is presented to the court, or the court has knowledge of it and has inspected it, and it is different from the printed act, the former should control. Acts 1876, page 28.

3. Where two attachments were levied on the same property, and an order was taken to sell it as perishable property expensive to keep, the defendant did not operate as a consolidation of the causes.

4. Where, after the levy of attachments, a third party purchased the claims from the plaintiff, and the attachments in attachment were amended by alleging that the plaintiffs sued for the use of such party, this did not operate as a dissolution of the attachments.
J. H. Plintz, by brief, for plaintiff in error.
J. S. W. T. Davidson, for defendants.

McNally vs. Mulhern & Co. et al. Appeal, from Richmond. Homestead. Fraud. Laws. Constitutional Law. (Before Judge Roney.)
Blandford, J.—1. Where an application for an exemption of personal property from the attachments of creditors of the applicant objected thereto on the ground of fraud, and the case was carried to the superior court, the plaintiff, who was the creditor, was entitled to the opening and conclusion. 25 Ga. 288.

2. A debtor who applies for an exemption of personal property from the attachments of all his property. He cannot retain any amount of money which he may deem necessary and needful to employ attorneys, pay his usual and ordinary expenses, and account for it; and if the schedule exceeds the amount to which he is entitled as an exemption, he must produce the money in court, and the court may order him to do so.

3. There was no error in charging as follows: "If you find from the evidence that John P. McNally (the applicant), at the time he filed his sworn schedule, withheld and reserved to himself a large sum of money, and that he has not since delivered up said money or accounted for it, and that he is entitled to a charge on that, under the law, he is not entitled to a homestead, and you should find against granting his application."

4. There was no error in charging that "the law says a man must come in with clean hands; otherwise he should not ask a homestead. If he comes into court with clean hands, he is entitled to it."

5. The statute which declares that an applicant for an exemption must make a full and true disclosure of everything which he has, and that if he is guilty of a fraud in failing to do so, he shall not be entitled to an exemption, is not in violation of the constitutional provision granting a right of exemption. It is a punishment for fraud which the Constitution declares the legislature have the power to impose.
Judgment affirmed.

Salon Dutcher, for plaintiff in error.
Presley & Cozart, Wm. H. Fleming; L. Plintz, for defendants.

by the act of 1878, which allows a recommendation by the jury in capital cases, whether the evidence is merely circumstantial or direct.

(b) As the law now stands, this case is not controlled by those in 35 Ga. 5; 48 Id. 119, and 51 Id. 121.
In order to add the solicitor general, the court allowed the stenographer to propound the questions to the jurors when put upon their voir dire, the solicitor general accepting or rejecting them as they were put upon the state. When one of the jurors had qualified himself as such, the stenographer inquired of him whether he was ready to answer the questions, and without a word, the solicitor general rejected the juror and announced that it was not the duty of the stenographer to accept the juror for the state, but simply to propound the statutory questions against the defendant, and that the juror had not been accepted by the state, and allowed the solicitor general to challenge him.

Held, that this was not error.
4. Where one ground of a motion for a new trial was, because one of the jurors rendering the verdict and acting as foreman of the panel had been previously to the trial, formed and expressed the opinion that the defendant was guilty of murder and should be hung, the affidavit of a witness to the effect that the juror stated before the trial that he thought the defendant ought to be hung, will not outweigh the sworn answer of the juror on his voir dire that he was impartial and had no bias or prejudice against the defendant, especially where the ground of the motion for a new trial was added after the death of the juror, and the presiding judge stated that he was well acquainted with the juror, who was a man of high character, and in the opinion of the judge would not have served on the jury if he had been biased or prejudiced against the defendant. 51 Ga. 182; 68 Id. 60.

(a) To disqualify one from being a juror in a criminal case, he must have formed and expressed an opinion either from having seen the defendant, or from having heard the testimony under oath. A man may form and express an opinion from rumor or from newspaper reports, and yet be a qualified and competent juror. If the opinion has not become fixed and determined. 45 Ga. 277 and cit.

Judgment affirmed.
Clifford Anderson, attorney general, by brief; Boykin Wright, solicitor general, for the state.

Moore, ex'x, vs. Dutton, next friend. Trover, from City Court of Richmond County. Witnesses. Verdict. (Before Judge Eve.)
Simmons, J.—1. Where the evidence was conflicting, the credibility of witnesses was for the jury; and the court below being satisfied with the verdict, this court will not interfere.

2. Where an action of trover was brought against an executor, and the declaration alleged that the plaintiff was in possession of the property and had converted it to her own use, the plaintiff was a competent witness to testify as to any matter that occurred after the death of the testator, and as to the executor's conduct in this case, was drawn out on cross-examination.

3. The verdict was not contrary to the charge of the court.
4. Trover having been brought to recover a cow, and the plaintiff having testified that its value was $20 and that it was worth sixty cents a day for hire, a verdict for $75, which was not greater than the amount fixed by the plaintiff's testimony, was not objectionable as being in excess of the highest proved value, although other witnesses fixed the value at a less amount.
Judgment affirmed.

Chas. Z. McCord, by Harrison & Peeples, for plaintiff in error.
F. W. Capers, Jr., by brief, for defendant.

Anderson vs. Freeman. Complaint, from City Court of Richmond County. Res Adjudicata. New Trial. (Before Judge Eve.)
Blandford, J.—The facts in this case are substantially what they were when it was here before (75 Ga. 93), and the ruling in that case governs this. Under the facts as disclosed in the record, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover against the defendant; and a new trial should have been granted.
Judgment reversed.

Harper & Bro., for plaintiff in error.
J. R. Lamar, for defendant.

Decisions Rendered November 15, 1887.
National Bank of Athens vs. Danforth et al., and Danforth, adm'rs, vs. Danforth et al. Equity, from Richmond County. Tax. Municipal Corporations. Levy and Sale. Waiver. Mortgages. Liens. Executions. Contractors. Delict and Creditor. The bond, the taking the rents and profits or enjoying the use for the time being, is liable for the taxes.

2. Defects and irregularities in returning municipal taxes and even omission to return the same, and imperfect returns are cured, by pointing out property to be levied upon by virtue of a tax bill, the issuance of which presupposes return, duly made, and such waiver by the person assessed will affect others interested in the property taxed, but not beyond the unpaid taxes really due on the specific property.

3. Taxes on the mortgaged premises properly paid by the mortgagee to protect his security, are charges on the property as against the mortgagee and all persons holding or claiming under him by lien or purchase subsequent to the date of the mortgage; but taxes not assessed on the specific property, though included in the same execution, and though paid by the mortgagee, except as against the defendant in execution.

4. To render a tax execution available to a transferee as a strict legal lien, to affect others than the defendant therein, the execution must be entered on the proper execution docket within thirty days after the transfer; and an entry not disclosing the name of the plaintiff, but giving the transferee as plaintiff, and not indicating that the execution is for taxes, is insufficient to uphold the lien save as against the defendant.

5. The lien of a contractor or mechanic for improvements is not a charge upon the premises or the improvements as against prior liens or incumbrances put upon the property by a previous owner, and duly recorded.

6. A bill, issued upon a judgment rendered for a debt secured by a deed made under 1909 of the Code, cannot be levied upon the realty conveyed as security until after the creditor has executed and filed and recorded a deed conveying the property to the debtor; and a sale by the sheriff to the creditor, the levy having been made after the execution of the deed, but before it was either filed or recorded, is utterly void.

7. The result is that the fund now in question, when realized, should be applied in order of priority as follows: First, to the mortgage bill, and so much of the tax bill, as represent the taxes for the years 1885, 1886 and 1887 on this specific property, to be ascertained by multiplying the assessment by the rate for each year; secondly, to the judgment for the debt covered by the security deed; thirdly, the surplus, if any, to be treated as belonging to the ultimate owner of the fee (Mrs. Clayton) and as her property to be applied, first, to the contractor's lien; secondly, to the residue of the tax bill; thirdly, the balance, if any, to be paid to her.

8. A contract to pay attorneys' fees for collecting, in advance, to principal and interest, is not, on its face, usurious; nor does it become usurious by reducing the debt to judgment and including in the judgment ten per cent for attorneys' fees.
Judgment in first case, reversed with direction; in second, affirmed.

L. H. Cobb; A. J. Cobb; J. H. Lumpkin, for plaintiff in error.
Frank H. Miller; Wm. K. Miller, for defendant.
Foster & Lamar, for Danforth.
J. S. & W. T. Davidson, for Clayton.

Trustees of the Academy of Richmond County vs. Bohler, tax collector. Refusal of injunction, from Richmond County. Constitutional Law. Charities. Trusts. (Before Judge Roney.)
Blandford, J.—The exemption from taxation of institutions of public charity, provided for by the Constitution, is of such institutions as property not as persons—the physical things, not the ideal institutions. Therefore, lands held in trust to appropriate the annual product to the erection of a poor-house, and the support of its inmates forever, are not exempt, but the poor-house, when erected, will be exempt, but not detached from which its support is to be derived.

Facts.—Testator devised to trustees and their successors all his real estate in Augusta, the annual product to be by them appropriated to the erection of a poor-house in Richmond County, and for the support of its inmates forever. See City Council vs. Trustees, (October term, 1886). This realty, worth $75,000, was assessed for state and county taxes for the year 1887, including school tax, and the trustees sought to enjoin the collection of the same. Injunction denied.

Frank H. Miller; Wm. K. Miller, by brief, for plaintiffs in error.
Boykin Wright, solicitor general, for defendant.

Food makes Blood and Blood makes Beauty. Improper digestion of food necessarily produces bad blood, resulting in a feeling of fullness in the stomach, acidity, heartburn, sick headache, and other dyspeptic symptoms. A closely confined life causes indigestion, constipation, biliousness and loss of appetite. To remove these troubles there is no remedy equal to Frickley Ash Bitters. I have tried and proven to be a specific.

HOW CHICUITO GOT A CHEW.
Strange Incident in the Frontier Life of a Mail Rider.

From the New York World.
One of a party of four seated around a table in an up-town cafe was a sedate-looking gentleman, small in stature and faultlessly dressed. Extreme neatness was the first thing that struck the eye in looking at him, yet there was a certain air of virility about him that made his careful attire seem out of place. One of the four addressed him familiarly as "Chiquito."

The name struck another of the party, who then heard it for the first time, as a rather singular way of addressing the sedate if not solemn Mr. Smith, and he said something to the effect:
"Oh, that's what our friend here and all the other fellows used to call me in the old days when we were forty-niners in California," said Chiquito. "It is a sort of hybrid Spanish, you know, and means small; it fitted me exactly in those days, for I'm not a large person now. But in those days, when I was a youth under twenty, I was not filled out and was very small, although I did carry the United States mail on horseback over a stretch of forty miles, nearly all of it a lonely mountain road."

"You must have met some queer people and strange incidents on those rides," one of the party remarked.
"Not often," replied Mr. Smith. "Many a time I went over the whole distance out and back without meeting a human being. At the times, however, I was a mail rider, a stray Indian and sometimes meet a white man, who always had a small arsenal strapped about his waist. I have seen a pistol in the holster in his saddle. It was a rencontre with one of those gentlemen at the loneliest spot in the lonely mountain road that is almost the only vivid memory I have of those days in the long ago."

There was a general desire expressed to hear of that incident, and Mr. Smith continued:
"Well, you know, to be a forty-niner in California you had to use tobacco in all forms. I don't know that there was any compulsion about it, legal or moral, but everybody else did, and I was not filled out and was very small, although I did carry the United States mail on horseback over a stretch of forty miles, nearly all of it a lonely mountain road."

"What the contractor got I never knew, but he paid me pretty well for carrying it, and I never had over half a dozen letters. Once in a while a stray newspaper would sometimes escape the many dangers of confiscation on the long route from the eastern states and find its way into my pouch. Sometimes after it got to me it would reach the person addressed to, but often it would not, for when it at last got to his position he would be long dead."

CITIZENS! A TERRIBLE MOMENT.

Here are the Men Who Were Sacrificed

FOR THEIR HONEST CONVICTIONS

Members of the Atlanta Police Department

WHO WERE TUNED OUT

Because they were Honest Enough to Say

THEY WERE ANTI-PROHIBITIONISTS

LET THEIR FRIENDS RALLY

And Rebuke Fanaticism and Hypocrisy.

When the Prohibitionists of Atlanta saw last year that they could not elect their city ticket, they begged for a compromise on the plea of Harmony. With certain victory in their grasp, the Antis agreed to the compromise ticket, with the promise that

ALL CITY OFFICES should be evenly divided by the council.

Was the Faith Kept?

The first thing the Prohibitionists did, after capturing the council, was to put Two Prohibitionists on the Board of Police Commissioners, defeating one of Atlanta's most prominent citizens, who was urged by his friends for one of the positions, because he was an Anti.

Then, what did the Prohibition Board of Police Commissioners do? Did they carry out the terms of the compromise?

AT ONE FELL SWOOP they knocked every Anti-Prohibitionist off of the Police Force, and put Prohibitionists in their places.

These are the Honest men who were thus sacrificed:

1. Z. B. Moon.

2. J. G. Russell.

3. George Steint.

[Communicated.]

Yes, terrible, for such, indeed, it was! I shall never forget it, even if I should live to be a hundred years old!

Many weighty events pass from the memory, but certainly not the moment which brings a man to the very brink of the grave, and in which he finds himself face to face with a horrible death.

I had lived for nearly five years in Australia, where I had amassed quite a handsome fortune, when suddenly a longing for home took possession of me, doubtless intensified by the fact that my affianced bride was about to sail for Europe, and I could not ensure the thought that the wide ocean was to roll between us. So I resolved to accompany her and our marriage was to be celebrated in our native land.

May Brodstone was the daughter of a wealthy farmer, and the most beautiful and attractive maiden for miles around. Before I knew her, she had been, perhaps, a wee bit coquettish—a fact which was destined to cost me dear.

Among her admirers was a certain Albert Streffer. With his dark complexion, his black hair and eyes, he belonged to that class of people who feel everything most keenly, and never forget an injury. He worshipped the very ground May trod upon, and I fear she did not always resist the temptation to flirt with him, although she assured me, and I could not doubt it for a moment, that she had never given him any real encouragement.

About this time, I appeared on the scene, and from the first moment of meeting, we felt that fate had destined us for each other. She immediately turned her back upon all her former admirers, became as staid and quiet as an India-rubber tree in a calm day, and finally whispered the little "yes" which was to seal my happiness forever.

Old Mr. Brodstone was satisfied with his daughter's choice, and, as there seemed to be no obstacle to our union, the engagement was announced at once. I chanced to be present when Albert Streffer first heard the news. With compressed lips and contracted brows, he glared, first at May and then at myself, until I felt that he would gladly have annihilated me, had it been possible.

Without uttering a word, he turned and went away. His conduct impressed me most unpleasantly, and May confessed to me later that she involuntarily shuddered whenever she met him of bitter hatred.

From this time, although business often brought him to our neighborhood, we saw Streffer but seldom; yet this man cast a shadow over all our happiness, and we were not at all sorry when we found ourselves on the ship which was to bear us to our new home. We had not lost sight of land, however, when, with a cry of surprise, May laid her hand upon my shoulder, and, pointing to the lower deck exclaimed:

"See, Alfred, there he is!"

And so in very truth it was. Leaning quietly over the rail, apparently watching the receding land, stood Alfred Streffer, a passenger upon the same ship as ourselves! This discovery was far from being an agreeable one to me, although I could not help laughing when May nestled close to my side and whispered anxiously:

"Dear Alfred, I don't know why it is, but I am afraid of that man. I cannot rid myself of the thought that he has evil design against us."

I did my best to dispel her fears and in this attempt Streffer's own conduct assisted me. He was entirely unobtrusive, and we saw him only casually, for except a few words which we casually exchanged, he did not intrude upon us in any way, and our voyage had been most prosperous, when, one night, a violent hurricane arose.

Our good ship battled bravely with the storm, but in vain. The masts fell overboard with a terrific crash, dragging some of the sailors with them, and before they could be cut away one of them was hurled with such violence against the vessel as to cause a dangerous leak, and on all sides the fearful cry was heard:

"We are sinking! Lower the boats! The pumps are useless!"

The captain's admirable coolness and presence of mind could not fail to inspire us with confidence. The boats were quickly lowered and while the passengers were taking their places, it suddenly occurred to me that in my haste I had left my mother's picture lying in my trunk. To hurry to my stateroom and lift the lid of my trunk was but the work of a moment; already I held the picture in my hand, when I heard steps descending the gangway, and in the dim light which fell from above I recognized Albert Streffer.

The diabolical expression of his face and the evil look in his treacherous eyes, revealed his purpose too clearly—he had come to murder me.

I seized my revolver and prepared to defend myself. But it was not his intention to attack me openly. Before I could prevent it he had closed the stateroom door and locked it on the outside.

All the horrors of my situation flashed across me in a moment. I was a prisoner upon the sinking ship. With a cry of rage I sprang to the door. My only answer was a fiendish laugh and the words:

"Who will marry May Brodstone now?"

Then he hurried up the stairs and all was still. I shouted for help—the howling of the tempest drowned my cries. I waited. There was a momentary lull in the storm and I heard the door given to push off. In my terrible anxiety I shouted again, but at the same moment the storm arose with redoubled fury, and no one heeded my frantic cries. All hope had indeed vanished. I was a prisoner alone upon the sinking ship—horrible thought! In wild despair I beat with all might against the door, although I knew too well that salvation was no longer possible, for, as the boats must inevitably be separated in the darkness of the night, I should not be missed before the ship was entirely wrecked. Indeed, how could I cherish any hope? During the occasional pauses in the storm I could hear the fatal water surging in the hold, could feel that with each movement the ship was settling lower and lower. Suddenly it gave a fearful lurch, a seething wave rushed down the gangway, forced its way under the door and flooded the stateroom. I cried aloud, for I believed all was over and I must die without making one effort to save my life.

I felt that I could have looked death firmly in the face, had I been upon deck, with God's free heaven above me, but my hair stood on end at the horrible thought that I was to drown shut up in a cage. Was there, then, no way of escape? I looked about me, and, uttering a sudden cry of joy, sprang for the door, unmindful of the fact that the water was rising higher and higher.

"Fool! idiot!" I cried. "Why have I not thought of this before? I am my own murderer."

My eyes had fallen on my revolver. With trembling eag

TO THE VOTERS

Fulton County, Irrespective of Position

PROHIBITION OR ANTI-PROHIBITION

Have a Few Words of Sobriety and Truth for the People of Atlanta, Regardless of Factional Differences.

The essential thing in government is a free and legal ballot. This goes deeper than all things else, because everything depends on this. A free and fair election, in every legal vote legally cast, is what every good citizen wants, and what every responsible citizen must have. We have absolute information, the details having gone through searching and accurate scrutiny, that there is a vast amount of illegal registration done with disregard of law, that would alarm every citizen of Atlanta, among the classes of illegal voters, which have been brought to light, and the names of our possession, are the following:

First. Persons have registered in the names of persons who are dead and have given the residence of the dead person as their own. Second. Persons have registered in the name of the former residence of men who have died, and who now live in other parts of the city, or out of the city. Third. Persons have registered in the name of a person who has been convicted of a crime, and who is now in the penitentiary. Fourth. Persons have registered, giving as their residence, vacant lots on which there is no house. Fifth. Persons who have registered in two or more names under different names, and those who have moved in the state a year and the county state.

Sixth. Persons who are under age. Seventh. Persons whose names were paid up for a year, but who are still in default for back taxes. These are but some of the classes of illegal voters who are registered in the name of persons who are dead, and who are still in default for back taxes. We have an instance now of a father whose two sons, both minors, were registered, and who is now trying to get their names off the registration list to save them from danger and prosecution. We have a case of man whose name was registered illegally and who is trying to get his name off the list.

It may be urged that some of these illegal voters are prohibitionists. If so, the prohibitionists hereby put themselves on record as declaring that those votes should not be cast even for prohibition, and shall not be cast. If the prohibition committee can prevent it. As dear as is the cause of prohibition to us, and as essential as it is to the moral and business prosperity of Atlanta, it is not worth the corruption of your registration list and the stuffing of your ballot box with illegal votes.

We make no charge except those sustained by the records and proofs. We simply show that we have hundreds of cases of illegal votes, the illegality of which is proven and that these votes ought not to be cast. Now we cannot be understood as obstructing, or hindering any legal voter in this election, or want every vote cast, white or colored, that is legally entitled to be cast. We will be prepared, before Wednesday of this week, a full list of every illegal vote that has been detected, with the full proof of its illegality, which will be open to inspection.

In conclusion, we ask every good citizen of Atlanta, white or colored to sustain us in this effort to keep the registration list in legal bounds, and protect your ballot-box. The ballot-box is the guarantee of your liberty, of the protection of your life and property and the prosperity of your city and country. If this vast number of illegal voters are permitted to exercise functions which do not belong to them in this election, they will remain on the registry list, subject to be expelled with tremendous power in future elections in this city. The good of Atlanta, the honor of Atlanta, depend on the work in which the prohibition committee is now engaged, of clearing the registration of illegal voters. In this work they ask the support of the people of Atlanta, irrespective of their opinions on this pending issue. The legality of the ballot box goes deeper than any question of politics, or public expediency, on which men may differ. If this election cannot be carried for prohibition fairly and by the legal vote of Atlanta, the prohibition committee does not want to carry it, and if, as we have no doubt, a majority of the legal voters favor prohibition, their will ought not to be and must not be, opposed or obstructed by the ballots of fraudulent voters.

The School Girl

Lightly humming, gently singing, / With her scented hair of locks, / And her cheeks of rosy pink, / She comes tripping down the sidewalk with her gay and happy looks.

And her merry eyes are dancing, / And her cheeks of rosy pink, / And her cheeks of rosy pink, / And her cheeks of rosy pink.

My tongue shall delight in talk of right, / My tongue shall praise each day, / I will urge it strong on the listening throng, / But I cannot vote that way.

A vote for the right is lost from sight, / For the cause is weak today, / I will urge it strong on the listening throng, / But I cannot vote that way.

With the party strong, though the cause be wrong, / My vote will still be cast, / Though want and war in streams may flow, / And whisky rule at last.

The widow's groan and the orphan's moan / Shall not affect my will, / I will pity them though, and tell them so, / But vote for whisky still.

CIRCUS DAY.

Sells Brothers' Big Show Take the Town.

A FIRST-CLASS PERFORMANCE GIVEN

The Weather and the Railroads Against It—The Season Drawing to a Close—Features of the Day.

The Sells Brothers have been promising Atlantians a fine show through the news and advertising columns of THE CONSTITUTION for the past month, and the readers of the paper in the city have been awaiting a fulfillment of that promise.

The promise has been filled. The Sells Brothers gave a show in Macon Friday—only one. The weather was against them, and with the railroad agents' o'clock, they left Macon at nine o'clock Friday night. By some means they did not leave the central city until near day yesterday morning, and consequently reached Atlanta very late.

The coming of the show and the big street parade promised had awakened general interest, and the streets and windows along the route of march were crowded long before the show arrived.

There was a crowd on the streets. The show, however, arrived too late to give the parade, and thousands of people, men, women and children—especially women and children—were disappointed.

But they were not more disappointed than the Sells Bros. These showmen pride themselves on their street parade, and when they found that they could not give it they were more troubled than the patient and impatient watchers along the line of march.

They gave no parade, but they gave a show—two shows, one in the afternoon and one at night, and both were good.

The afternoon show opened at two o'clock, and a little later. The attraction was not what it ought to have been—namely the traditional Atlanta circus crowd, by any means, but there were several thousand people present, the majority being the good, fun-loving people of the city. No one who went to the show doubted the merits of it, because "Sells Bros." was above the door, and all were satisfied that the show was one of the best of its kind. The circus proved as good as any that ever came south.

The canvas presented two rings and a stage, as well as a hippodrome track and the show opened with all filled. The opening plays were such as every circus-goer sees, and no special interest was aroused until C. W. O'Neil introduced twenty-three horses which he rode and drove, winning the admiration of the large audience. Then common place events attracted the people until the Tifford brothers were introduced in "Models of the Antiques." This caught the home, and it was good. Again people smiled, until M. E. Monahan in the tight rope and Miss Jessie Ashton in the rings, came. This was good. "Rats" was the cry then, until Mr. Willis Sells came out. His riding was simply grand and caught the audience.

There were, in addition to those mentioned, many good features. The audience was especially pleased with the wild west features and the exciting hippodrome races.

Taken as a whole, the circus is good. But one of the best features is the polite, gentlemanly attention of all of the attaches. One of the Sells Brothers is always on the ground and gives his personal attention to everything. Nothing goes wrong on the grounds where the show opens.

The Preachers Solid For Prohibition. The anti-thesis under the fact that the preachers of Atlanta are solid for prohibition. They know it is an unanswerable appeal to the people to say that the preachers are for prohibition.

Dr. Tucker, whose name the anti-thesis takes so much interest in, and no better man lives than Dr. Tucker, is a prohibitionist, and will vote for prohibition.

They said that Bishop Wayman counseled preachers not to go into the prohibition fight. Bishop Wayman, over his own name in yesterday's CONSTITUTION, says that the statement is "entirely false." He begs every preacher in the A. M. E. church to do all in his power to put down the "monster liquor."

Now they take Dr. McDonald, who was advertised to speak at the warehouse, and say he did not agree to speak. That is untrue. Dr. McDonald did agree to speak, and is ready to speak, and will speak for prohibition. He opened a former meeting with prayer, and is a prohibitionist heart and soul.

The preachers of Atlanta are for prohibition. In a question which has a moral side, and this question goes deep into morals, the unbroken appeal and testimony of the preachers, white and colored, is crushing and unanswerable to any reasonable man.

The Strongest Objection to Barrooms. Is their leading the boys to ruin. A young gentleman, living at Powder Springs, writing from his sick bed, and sending the beautiful poem printed below, and which is his statement of his personal experience when a boy:

once lived in Atlanta, and I know from experience something of the effect of tempting barrooms placed on nearly every corner. At the tender age of twelve years, I had learned to visit barrooms, and I blush to speak of it, but it is true. I had begun to drink of the maddening cup simply because the temptation was thrown round me.

This boy had as good home influences as any boy ever had, and was well right led to destruction. But he is saved, and is anxious that other boys shall not be so sorely tried. This is the poem he sends:

Party-Shackled Churchman.

BY JENNIE SAYRE.

I'm a temperance man, I will do what I can, / I will earnestly talk and pray; / I will labor with much for the cause of right, / But I cannot vote that way.

With eloquence warm I will urge reform— / Let all the world awake to see— / I never shrink from temperance work, / Excepting when I vote.

I will labor for the world that will know / I'm a sincere temperance man; / I will talk of laws that will aid the cause, / But I cannot vote the plan.

My tongue shall delight in talk of right, / My tongue shall praise each day, / I will urge it strong on the listening throng, / But I cannot vote that way.

A vote for the right is lost from sight, / For the cause is weak today, / I will urge it strong on the listening throng, / But I cannot vote that way.

With the party strong, though the cause be wrong, / My vote will still be cast, / Though want and war in streams may flow, / And whisky rule at last.

The widow's groan and the orphan's moan / Shall not affect my will, / I will pity them though, and tell them so, / But vote for whisky still.

John Ryan's Sons Will make a big drive in "Robt. K. Davies" fine Neckwear for gents; 100 doz. "Teck" Scarfs at 25 cents; also 50 doz. "Four-in-hand" at 35 cents. The above are worth 75 cents to $1.00.

An Excellent Piece of Work. Mr. P. P. Carter, the artist, has on exhibition at Thornton's art gallery his splendid portrait of the Rev. Dr. H. C. Morrison, which has been so much admired by Dr. Morrison's friends. The work is artistically, one of the finest portraits ever seen in the city, and is great credit to the distinguished artist. The eloquent pastor's congregation is especially invited to see the picture, which was made by direction of the ladies of the church. The portrait was at the exposition, where it created much favorable comment. It represents the pastor as being seated in his library with an open Bible in his lap, and shows the entire figure life size. It is certainly a beautiful piece of work.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CLUB.

Mr. Menko's Speech—Other Talks of Interest.

The Young Men's Club held an interesting meeting at headquarters last night. The hall was filled to its fullest capacity.

The following calculation was on the black-board:

Value of the warehouse.....$4,000
Yachts.....2,500
City of opera house.....1,500
Ornamentally by the artist's own showing.....600
Judge Samuel Steele had it announced that the veteran made by the artist that he should have said that Professor R. R. Wright went to the Bethel church Friday night and was roused, was among the very particular.

Dr. William T. Goldsmith called attention to the figures presented in this campaign. Captain George Wright showed that the increase of taxable values in 1886 was $871,770, and in 1887, $1,447,928, making a total in two years of $576,158. Captain E. W. Grady shows that the banking capital increased in two years $153,330, making a total in two years of $345,440. Captain E. W. Grady gives figures to prove that Atlanta has consumed in two years $5,400,000, or $2,700,000 per annum, and has a total of $4,800,000, or a loss of $845,702. How can this be true and those purchasing houses be increased to 68? The figures don't lie, somehow.

Short and spicy talks were made by R. T. Dow, Julius Menko, H. W. Grady, W. T. Cowles and others.

Mr. Dow gave a succinct history of the organization, objects and purposes of the Mutual Aid Brotherhood, actually backed by the gray ring of the United States. The money paid to Madison and Griffin for liquor finds its way into Atlanta banks, along with the shekels of the Madisonian.

Mr. Dow said that anti-prohibitionists never reformed him. That he knew something about wiremen in Atlanta, and his managers and cronies were not without a position here, but it did not, and would not, influence him in the least from standing true to the last. Concluding Mr. Menko said:

The other night I was walking with a man and saw a young man being taken into a house. He said it was one of those damned things that he had seen in the city. I inquired further and found it was a church—Evans' chapel. He said he had seen it in the city, and he said it was a church—Evans' chapel. He said he had seen it in the city, and he said it was a church—Evans' chapel.

Of prohibition prohibiting, Mr. Menko said: If they are so much in liquor in Atlanta, why are they so much in liquor in Atlanta? If they are so much in liquor in Atlanta, why are they so much in liquor in Atlanta? If they are so much in liquor in Atlanta, why are they so much in liquor in Atlanta?

Mr. W. T. Cowles made a telling speech, which elicited repeated applause.

The big reductions at John Ryan's Sons have certainly struck the "key note." Think of it. French Novelty Dress Patterns at $10, former price $30.00.

A Piano Recital.

It will be pleasing intelligence to the music-loving people of Atlanta to know that Miss Carrie Matthews has recovered from her recent illness, and is preparing for a tour to the city in January.

The gifts of Miss Matthews as a pianist are certainly rare enough to warrant the public in expecting a rare evening on the occasion of her recital. It is hardly saying too much to claim that Miss Matthews' powers have seldom been surpassed by one of her peers in this country, and her previous work has done much to stimulate other young ladies in Atlanta and vicinity to a study of music.

John Ryan's Sons have added fifty cases of Dress Goods to their already famous bargains of last week. Look at this: All-wool double width French Foulle Cloth 38 cents, which is exactly half price.

CITIZENS!

Here are the Men Who Were Sacrificed FOR THEIR HONEST CONVICTIONS.

Members of the Atlanta Police Department WHO WERE TURNED OUT Because they were Honest Enough to Say

THEY WERE ANTI-PROHIBITIONISTS. LET THEIR FRIENDS RALLY And Rebuke Fanaticism and Hypocrisy.

When the Prohibitionists of Atlanta saw last year that they could not elect their city ticket, they begged for a compromise on the plea of Harmony. With certain victory in their grasp, the Antis agreed to the compromise ticket, with the promise that ALL CITY OFFICES should be evenly divided by the council.

Was the Faith Kept? The first thing the Prohibitionists did, after capturing the council, was to put Two Prohibitionists on the Board of Police Commissioners, defeating one of Atlanta's most prominent citizens, who was urged by his friends for one of the positions, because he was an Anti.

Then, what did the Prohibition Board of Police Commissioners do? Did they carry out the terms of the compromise?

AT ONE FELL SWOOP they knocked every Anti-Prohibitionist off of the Police Force, and put Prohibitionists in their places. These are the Honest Men who were thus sacrificed:

1. Z. B. Moon.
2. J. G. Russell.
3. George Steint.
4. Thos. McWilliams.
5. Henry McWilliams.

no pet but a dog named Bounce; she will help drive the cows home and is a good yard dog. I am going to try to make a good, young dog about Perry. I have made it myself. May I be at school now? I miss her very much. I have a cousin I play with but he is a boy; he likes to juggle, play butterfly; that is a play we have, but I don't like to play dolls. I have ten dolls, one is a big French doll that came away from Cincinnati. Ain't that a far way for a doll to come? May I write about myself? I will put my letter in the W. B. B. box. I have plenty of dolls too, but she packed up hers when she went. She gave me little Lord Fontenoy; the named him after a boy in a book. I am just as old as she is and my name is Ann About Perry. Mama calls me "Dimpie" and sometimes May calls me "Dimpie." Aunt Susie, please tell the cousins to write to me like they do to May.

The partridges are fat. The rabbits are creeping. I must go to bed. I am sure I am sleeping.

Oral Perry, St. Simon's Mills, Ga.—I am Oral, May's little sister, and I want to have a letter in May's paper too. I am sure you will let me. Johnnie Murchison and William Mathews, Brunswick, Ala.—Will you accept the names of two more little girls to appear with your niece. We are twelve and sister ten years old. We have never seen anything in your paper from the children near us and we are anxious to see our names for the first. We are not going to school now, but I commenced to read. TWO COUNTIES

At War Over the Line Between Them.

HABERSHAM SCOPS IN A TOWN

The Case Reviewed—Hon. Logan E. Blackley's Word-Taking of Mountain Scenery, County Lines and Empires.

The supreme court of Georgia will soon be called to review a case from Habersham county, in which the line between that county and Rabun is involved.

The case of Rabun county vs. Habersham county was tried in Habersham superior court in September 1886, and a verdict rendered for the defendant. Chief Justice Blackley having been the counsel for Rabun county will be disqualified for presiding next week.

His declaration in the case is full, minute and graphic.

The following is the declaration filed in Habersham superior court:

Georgia, Habersham county, to the honorable, the superior court of Georgia.

The petition of Rabun county sheweth that the general line dividing the waters of Rabun and Habersham below the mouth of Wild Cat creek was established by the act of 1828, and that the line between said county and Rabun is involved.

ordinaries, met at a certain point dividing fractions 183 and 184, and from thence ran, define and mark what they believed to be the county line, and in so doing, ran directly to the crest of the above ridge, and thence followed the crest on the true county line, after reaching the crest to follow the top of the ridge.

which top is, and has been, known to the public as the true line, as established by the act of 1828. A plat of this survey signed by the surveyors, as co-surveyors, of the county of Rabun, is still in existence, and although incorrect in stating the land line instead of the corner of fraction 183, it is correct after the line reaches the crest of the ridge, and in giving it as it does to follow the whole of the ridge, and in truth and in fact every house within the village is in Rabun, the same being located entirely on fractions 183 and 184, and all of them on the Rabun side of the crest of the ridge.

This village by the name of Tallulah was incorporated by the act of 1828, and the act of incorporation contains a legislative recognition of the village as being in Rabun county, with the railroad depot in the center of the village, and in fact every house within the village is in Rabun, the same being located entirely on fractions 183 and 184, and all of them on the Rabun side of the crest of the ridge.

The ordinary of Rabun refused to issue a similar order and direction to the county surveyor of Rabun county, and persisted in his refusal, until compelled by mandamus to issue it.

Yesterday was a dull day at the capitol and in all the courts. The governor removed the disabilities of a justice of the peace, and selected a day in December for "Arbor Day." Other news will be found below.

The Governor and His Cabinet. JAMES T. GAFFORD, a justice of the peace in Chattahoochee county, was convicted in the September term of the superior court of that county for malfeasance in office and was sentenced to pay a fine of $22 and by operation of law was discharged from his office. Upon the petition of the grand jury, the sheriff, and clerk of the court of the county, the official recommendation, the solicitor general and the presiding judge, together with the advice of citizens, Gaillard on yesterday, after the payment of his fine, had his disabilities removed by Governor Gordon, and by executive order was restored to all his rights and privileges as a citizen of the state of Georgia.

THE FOLLOWING PROCLAMATION was issued yesterday from the executive office:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, ATLANTA, Ga., November 13.—The fourth Wednesday in November has been heretofore designated as "Arbor Day" for the state of Georgia. It has been found, however, that this day is too early for a large portion of the state, and that Wednesday is a more appropriate day for children attending school. Therefore, on the recommendation of President Frisbie, Secretary of Agriculture, and of the officials of the Southern Forestry congress, and of other interested parties, I appoint Friday, the 23rd day of December, as "Arbor Day" for this state, and recommend that it be observed by the people generally, and especially by municipal corporations and public schools.
